Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

This row of five two-story, three-bay wide houses vernacular Queen Anne-style brick houses with shed roofs and sheet metal cornices were built c. 1895 by the same builder responsible for 1930 – 1938 Fairmount Ave. in the next block. None of the houses retain their original brick facades, which were always painted; all have had their facades covered with formstone.

The houses are two stories in height, 13' wide and occupy lots 79' deep. Each house is three small rooms deep and there is no backbuilding. Each house has a single hooded chimney located at the rear corner of the house. The houses are constructed in common bond, which was always painted. The shed roofs are capped by a sheet metal cornice consisting of a crown molding set above a lower molded area. A lower molding strip defines a plain brick frieze area.

The houses have extremely narrow windows so as to create a three-bay effect in a narrow 13'-wide house. All door and window openings have segmentally arched brick lintels, composed of a double row of headers, plain tympanums and wood sills. The original narrow, 1/1 sash survive, but some openings have been boarded over. Doorways have very deep single-light transoms and there are a variety of replacement door types. The houses sit on medium-height basements, lit by two tall sashes set beneath each first floor window. Each house is reached by four marble steps.

Builder/Architect

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

This group of houses significant as representing the level of architectural stylishness builders were willing to give to small street houses in the late nineteenth century and is testament to the fact that there was no stigma attached to small street living. The houses were built according to a pattern that was quite common to the city's working class neighborhoods of the period c. 1870 to 1910. Recognizing that workers held different levels of jobs (and pay), builders created a hierarchy of house sizes (and prices) in the new neighborhoods going up to serve the expanding factory districts ringing the harbor and northeast and southwest of the central city. Builders acquired anywhere from an eighth to a half of a city block and built 14' to 15'-wide three-bay-wide, two-story houses on the main streets, and smaller, 11' to 13'-wide two-bay-wide, two-story houses on the narrower streets bisecting the blocks. Typically, in this period, main street houses might sell for $1,200 - $1,500; small street houses for $700 - $900.

Occasionally, the builder retained ownership of his small street houses to provide income for himself as rental properties. In this way people of varying means could afford to live in the same block. If they couldn't afford the approximately $750 purchase price of the small street houses, then they could afford the $8 or so a month it would cost to rent one, while they saved to be able to buy their own home later.

The houses are especially significant because of their proximity to the slaughterhouses of southwest Baltimore and their related industries, particularly the William Wilkens & Co. Curled Hair Manufactory, one of the largest employers in the area. A number of German-American owned breweries were also located in this section of the city. Moderately-priced housing was built to provide homes for the mainly German immigrants who came to southwest Baltimore to work in these rapidly expanding industries in the decades after the Civil War.
